JOHN ROBERTS'S COSTLY VISIT

After Calling At Schermerhorn Home On Cedar Street He Called Up Police, And Is Arrested On Charge Of Public Intoxication—Now Out $15.

John Roberts of West Hurley paid his first visit to Kingston since last summer on Monday afternoon. He had a bottle of liquid refreshment with him and sampling it too freely led to his arrest that afternoon on a charge of public intoxication after he had been ejected from the residence of Mrs. Nicholas Schermerhorn on Cedar street.

It was late that afternoon when police headquarters received a telephone call from Roberts, and Officer Hess was sent to the scene and was informed by Roberts that he wanted his $5 back that he had left at the Schermerhorn house. He informed the officer that he had gone to the house, and, struck by the appearance of one of Mrs. Schermerhorn's daughters, had made a date with her to go walking. For the privilege of walking with the young lady he said he left $5 on the table.

"But she did not keep the date," said Roberts wrathfully. He then became so abusive insisting on "his rights as a citizen" that Officer Hess was forced to place him under arrest on a charge of public intoxication.

This morning in police court Roberts again told his story to Judge Schirick but was somewhat vague as to details. The young lady was also present and told her side of the story. She said that the money Roberts had left on the table was to pay rent for a room he had engaged in the house. She said that Roberts had also offered her $5 to go with him for a walk but she had declined.

Judge Schirick imposed a fine of $10 stating to Roberts "A fool and his money was soon parted." Roberts left his gold watch as security with the police while he went uptown to raise the amount of the fine from his friends.

CHICAGO IN THROES OF DRIVE ON ORGANIZED VICE.

Is Called Wickedest City In The World.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Chicago, March 6.—Two thousand police stood guard today, over alleged disorderly houses in Chicago. Chief of Police Charles C. Fitzmorris ordered officers stationed at the front and rear doors of every suspected place.

Three women and five men were arrested early in the day in a raid on a flat in the "gold coast" district.

Fitzmorris recently was criticized by welfare workers who charged that vice flourished in what they called "the wickedest city in the world." His critics were predicting now that an outbreak of crime would result with which the remainder of the department would be unable to cope.

Chief Justice McKinley, who rejected a graud jury report exonerating Fitzmorris in its vice inquiry and who has instituted steps for another investigation, commented thus on the new order:

"If the chief sees fit to station all his men to guard a town pump, that is his own responsibility."

ONLY THIRD OF ICE CROP STORED

Artificial Ice Supplies Remaining Two-Thirds Needed in New York Market—Knickerbocker Ice Company Now Has 92,000 Tons of Ice on Hand in This District.

The Knickerbocker Ice Company last week completed the work of harvesting ice in this district by storing 18,000 tons in the Esopus house. This winter the company filled but two houses. The other house filled was at Turkey Point where 14,000 tons were cut and stored.

The Flatbush ice house has on hand 40,000 tons of ice from the winter of 1921-22, while at East Kingston is stored 20,000 tons of last winter's ice.

The total tonnage in the four houses is 92,000 tons which is about a third of the amount of ice harvested in other years before artificial ice came into general use in New York city. It is estimated that fully two-thirds of the ice used in New York is artificial ice. Natural ice is used largely during the hot months of June, July and August.

At one time there were twelve ice houses in this district controlled by the Knickerbocker Ice Company. Today they are but six.

CARLOAD OF FORD PARTS ARRIVES

Millard Has Received 35,000 Pieces of Replacement Parts for Cars—First Carload of Automobile Parts Ever Received Here.

The first solid carload, of automobile parts ever consigned to anyone in Kingston has been received from Detroit by the James Millard & Son Company. The car carried 36 tons of Ford parts, consisting of 35,000 distinct pieces of machinery.

When it is considered that automobile parts used to be ordered sent by parcel post or express, one piece at a time as needed, with the customers waiting, with his car idle, until the parts were ordered and received, one can begin to realize the extent to which the automobile business has grown in Kingston.

Now the business has grown to such a magnitude that parts used for repairs come in carload lots, with the result that there is no waiting for replacement of worn or broken parts. In two hours, Mr. Millard says, a totally wrecked engine and transmission can be replaced with new.

Of course the Ford will be shown at the big automobile show in the armory on March 15, 16 and 17 and probably its big brother, the Lincoln, will also be there.

"SUDDEN DEVELOPMENT" BRINGS WINTER BACK

New Snow Blanket Predicted—Thaw to Follow.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, March. 6.—By nightfall, the entire Atlantic coast from Washington north to the Canadian border will be blanketed with snow, according to the predictions of United States weather bureau forecasters this morning.

Forecasters characterized the acute change in the weather as "a very sudden development." The snow flurry which is passing over the east today, they said, was caused by a storm which started late yesterday over New Mexico, and set in simultaneously over a wide area extending from St. Joseph, Mo., to Washington.

New England will see the heaviest snow, the weather bureau predicted. Through most of New York and Pennsylvania, it is expected, a thaw will set in tomorrow or Thursday, while in the more immediate vicinity of Washington a change for the warmer will begin late tonight.

South and west of Washington, the storm is expending itself in rain.

TEAGLE LAUGHS AT "DOLLAR GAS"

"No Man Knows What Price Will Be," Says Standard Head, "But Probably Price Will Not Go Up at All."

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, March 6.—Declaring the government committee investigating the price of gasoline "simply reached up in the air and brought down a figure," W. C. Teagle, president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, today denied there was any likelihood of gasoline prices reaching the $1 per gallon mark in the near future.

"Gasoline is no more likely to reach a price of $1 a gallon than it is $10," Teagle said. "The La Follette report might as well have read '$5 or $10.' They did not do that because anyone could see that it would be absurd.

"Alcohol and other substitutes can be produced at 30 cents a gallon and are being made to compete with oil. Supply and demand fluctuate so in this business that no man can say exactly what will happen but in all probability the price will not go up at all."

He asserted the La Follette report was inspired by politics.

Friedrich Plant Yields Two Carloads of "Johnny Walker" With Counterfeit Stamps and Labels.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Philadelphia, March 6.—Half a million dollars worth of confiscated liquors are today in custody of the prohibition authorities here as a result of a series of raids directed by Frederick A. Hazeltine, newly appointed prohibition enforcement director for eastern Pennsylvania.

The largest seizure was made at the bottling plant of John Friedrich, where two freight cars on a private spur track yielded 4,000 sacks, each sack containing 24 bottles of supposed Johnny Walker Scotch. All were marked "for export only."

Several thousand counterfeit stamps and labels are said also to have been seized, bearing such markings as "Aged in the wood," and other phrases.

According to the dry agents, ten men were caught in the act of bottling diluted liquor, from barrels when the raid occurred. It is said a large quantity of the stock had been shipped from Savannah, Ga. Other raids on local breweries netted 300 barrels of beer said to exceed the legal alcoholic content.

NATURALIZATION DAY IN COURT

Thirty-seven Admitted to Citizenship, Four Denied—Grand and Trial Juries—Big Calendar but Few Cases Ready.

The March term of supreme court was convened at the court house Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock with Justice Rosch presiding. There is a grand and trial jury in attendance.

Although there are 290 cases on the calendar few of them were marked ready for trial at the call of the calendar and it was with difficulty that Judge Rosch was able to make up a Tuesday day calendar. Many of the cases were marked over the term.

Thomas McManus of Marlborough was selected as foreman of the grand jury. George Burt of Woodstock was the only member of the grand jury excused by the court. He not being a property owner, exercised that excuse. A number of the trial jurors were out of the county and consequently not served by the sheriff and several others were able to present legal excuses and were excused by the court.

With the understanding that they would not be moved for trial until Wednesday morning Nos. 205, 206, 207, 208 were placed at the foot of the day calendar. Mr. Flanagan, attorney for plaintiffs, had agreed to give defendants' attorney, G. B. Shultz, one day's notice before moving the cases. They are negligence actions brought against Morris Moskowitz.

TWO CASES IN SUPREME COURT

Verdict of $1,050.20 Directed Against Stessin—Jury Gets Auto Collision Case.

Supreme Court convened this morning at 10 o'clock, at which time two cases were disposed of. In the case of the Ellenville Live Poultry Company, Inc., against I. Stessin and another of this city, a verdict was directed by the court in favor of plaintiff and against the defendants. The action was brought to recover $1,050.20 due plaintiff for poultry which had been purchased by defendants. There was no appearance on the part of defendants.

The second action was also undefended. Richard K. Fox et al., proprietors of the Empire Garage on McEntee street, brought an action against Luther W. Myers for damage to one of their taxicabs in a collision in June, 1921. The amount sued for was $187.74, is being the cost of repairs to a Nash car and for three days' loss of service at $10 per day, together with $10 for labor for temporary repairs.

The collision took place at the corner of Abeel street and Wurts street. The Fox car was stopped at the foot of Wurts street to discharge passengers when, according to the testimony of plaintiff, the car of the defendant came down the Wurts street hill and crossed the center of the highway and crashed into the taxicab, damaging the left hand side. Defendant did not stop to give his name but the number of the car was secured and communication to the automobile bureau gave the owner's name. Chris J. Flanagan appeared for plaintiffs. The case was submitted to the jury at 11 o'clock.

There being no other cases for the consideration of the jury, all jurors were excused until Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock.

K. H. S. BASEBALL MATERIAL SCANTY

But Experience In Other Sports Shows That Doesn't Mean Anything—Track, Now a Major Sport, Receiving More Attention.

The prospects for track and baseball at K. H. S. are about equal this season. There is probably more material for track than for any other sport that the school supports, and it is expected that this year there will be a larger turnout than ever. Under the new ruling, track is a major sport, and so comes under the supervision of the New York State Association, the same as football, basketball and baseball. This change will possibly bring more men to the track, as in former years some who really were better in field events than at the national game, preferred taking a chance at baseball in order to make one of the major sports, than to being sure of a place on a team of the minor sports. The contestants will now have sectional and state contests. On May 19, the sectional championship event in which Kingston will have a part will be held at Poughkeepsie. The winner of this event will go to Schenectady on May 30 to meet the winners of other sectional championships on the field at Union College.

The events of the contest are:

100 yard dash, 220 yard dash, 440 yard dash, ½ mile run, and 1 mile run.

220 yard low hurdle race, using 30 inch hurdles.

Medley relay race, in which the first man runs 100 yards, the second runs 220, the third 440, and the fourth 880.

The field events will be; high jump, running broad jump, 12 pound shot-put, and the pole vault.

Kingston has come out third in the past two years, but expects to make a better showing this time. Allen Powley, the only letter man of last year who is back at school, is captain of the team, and Mr. Hermann is coach.

A meeting will be held this week to find out how many men are interested in the sport, and practice will start as soon as weather conditions permit.

Baseball finds three letter men again in the lineup, Vogt, who is captain this season, McLane and Howard. Stumpf and Hoffman who attracted considerable admiration by their playing last year, are out of the game this season, the former by the doctor's orders, the latter by virtue of the "counts" rule. Commenting on this lack of old men, Coach Perry, in a meeting of the prospective candidates, stated in part:

"The outlook for football was great, but the outcome was poor; the outlook for basketball was better than that for football, but Kingston was only third in the league standing; the outlook for baseball is poor, but this will be the sport in which the school will come out ahead. As long as the old fight is there, Kingston will make herself felt."

Practice has been started, that is such practice as the limited space will permit; the gymnasium is being utilized as an indoor training grounds, and will be used as such until the latter part of this month. In this way, the candidates for the battery positions at least will get some training.

May be Some Time Yet Before Busses Will be Able to Run.

The Kingston-New Paltz bus line, which has been tied up by the impassable condition of the road between this city and that village, is still unable to run through to the village and is operating only as far as Perrine's Bridge. The bus line has not been able to run through to New Paltz since early in January and has made but four round trips since the first big snow storm early this year. Martin Jordan, owner of the bus line, stated today that he was unable to say when he would be able to resume trips.

ROB GRAVES TO RESELL CASKETS

WORKED FOR MONTHS

One of Robbers Confesses That Frequently, After a Burial, They Went to the Cemetery at Night and Recovered Casket.

Atlanta, Ga.—A gruesome story of grave robbing on the part of five negro undertakers who sold coffins and then dug them up the nights following the funerals and reburial of the bodies without covering, in order to resell the caskets, was told county police here following the arrest of the party in the act of robbing two new graves in a negro cemetery near Atlanta Federal penitentiary.

Thurman Jones, one of the men arrested, confessed. He said that one of the coffins which the police found in the undertaker's possession had been sold many times and that the scheme had been worked successfully for many months. Penalty for conviction on the charge of grave robbing calls for from one to nty years' imprisonment.

As a result of the disclosures a general disinterment of bodies in a large negro cemetery here was begun. The graveyard was the scene of wild disorder, with relatives of the dead weeping and wailing as they dug into the graves of their dead. Six cases where the coffins were missing were discovered the first day.

Officers Lay In Wait.

To investigate rumors of grave robbing, three Fulton county policemen lay in wait at the cemetery one night. The burial grounds is on a slope almost within the shadow of the federal prison walls.

The officers hid behind a tomb when they saw a hearse approaching in the moonlight. The hearse stopped beside the grave of a man buried the day before. Two negroes, equipped with spades and picks, began to dig into the grave.

Three other members of the party proceeded to another grave and began to dig there. The men had a ground cloth and worked in real grave-digger style. They drew the two caskets to the surface, took out the bodies and placed the coffins in the waiting hearse. One man then went back and pushed the bodies back into the graves and replaced the earth.

As the party mounted the hearse to depart the three officers drew their revolvers and captured all five negroes. They were: S. F. Ware, proprietor of the Atlanta Undertaking Co., a leading negro undertaker; Bessie and Fannie Lee, embalmers, and Claude Maddox and Thurman Jones.

$100 to $500 Each Time.

Jones broke down after being grilled for the rest of the night by the officers and told of the plot. He said that they had been making from $100 to $500 each time they recovered a casket; that they usually operated only on dark, rainy nights, but that they needed money and had decided to take a chance in the moonlight. He declared that often in the last few months they helped in the burial and that night had recovered the casket.

The two caskets now in the possession of the police are costly affairs, containing many silver ornaments. They apparently had been used more than once.

Pays Railroad for Stolen Ride.

ONE DOG SAVES LIFE OF ANOTHER

Airedale Pup Rescues Setter That Fails Helpless on Railroad Track.

Cincinnati.—"Fritz," an Airedale pup, rescued "Major," a huge Llewellyn setter, from death under a Baltimore & Ohio passenger train at Colerain avenue.

The two dogs were playing on the railroad tracks. A rumble and a warning whistle, a flyer heaves into view around a curve 200 feet down the track. Fritz leaps from the path of the train, then looks back.

Major has fallen between the rails and is lying with his feet rigid in the air. He has been stricken with a fit and is paralyzed temporarily.

Harry Schramm, a barber, and Charles M. Hart, a mail carrier, rushed to the tracks, intent on rescuing Major, but Fritz beats them to it. He rushes to the spot where Major lies. Schramm and Hart are not 20 feet behind him.

Fritz grasps Major by the back of the neck and with a desperate pull hauls him over the rail a few seconds before the train crashes by. Schramm and Hart, wonder struck, attempt to lift Major up but a warning growl from Fritz stops them.

Pausing only the fraction of a minute, Fritz again takes Major by the scruff of the neck and drags him down a declivity 75 feet to Thiele's saloon. There, standing guard over his companion, he licks Major's face, and in a few moments Major comes out of his coma. Hart and Schramm report the incident to a disbelieving crowd.

Eugene Weatherly, night chief of detectives, a dog lover, heard the story. All day he spent in locating Schramm and Hart, who reiterated the story of the rescue.

PASTOR'S HAT HALTS BLAZE

Astoria (Ore.) Preacher Uses Headgear to Beat Out Flames on Roof of Edifice.

Astoria, Ore.—Members of the First Baptist church congregation have just been told how their edifice had been saved from destruction in the great fire by the pastor, Rev. E. A. Gottberg, whose only apparatus was a battered felt hat.

Rev. Mr. Gottberg rushed to his church, located at some distance from the main fire area, as soon as he knew the fire was in progress throughout the city.

Mounting to the roof through a trapdoor he found that sparks had just ignited the shingles in several places. He pulled off his hat, beat out the first incipient blaze, scrambled along to the next one and beat that out and kept up this process as fast as new fires broke out.

After four hours of single-handed labor he found the danger over and descended, having put out fires in more than a dozen places from the church roof.

"Shake a Leg," Cries Polly; Thief Flies Leaving Loot

Seattle, Wash.—"Shake a leg," a salutation from "Polly O," a parrot, prevented a burglar from making off with a sack of furs, jewelry and silk garments from the home of A. R. Ross. The family had retired, but left the front hall light burning. Gaining admittance through the basement the intruder had ransacked all floors. When he started to leave, the parrot in the living room spied the figure and greeted him with her pet expression. Thinking he had been trapped, the burglar dropped the sack and fled.

WANAMAKER'S DISCOVERY.

A Striking Proof of Value of Newspaper Advertising.

John Wanamaker was one of the most successful merchants in the world. In spite of his wealth he commanded the respect and friendship of all classes.

Speaking in a reminiscent vein to some advertising men in 1916, Mr. Wanamaker said:

"Our little allowance of advertising money went to the newspapers then as it does nearly altogether today, because if I ever have a monument for discovering anything, it will be for finding out that the only advertising of direct and instant benefit to both merchant and customer is in the daily newspaper of known circulation.

"All others are vanity and vexation of spirit. To have learned this fact has greatly helped my enterprises, though often there has been serious discomfort in saying so publicly and in breaking away from posters, leaflets and weeklies."

Much Resin in Hawaiian Tree.

When you pull a piec of bark off the chunky old monkey-pod tree, reports a traveler recently in Hawaii, you smell so much resin that it seems to you that the hot sun alone would be enough to set the bark flaming like a torch. It makes a tall, pointed flame, like the flame on a big candle. Flit lurks in the tree somewhere, that is certain. They say that at one time the old Hawaiians tapped the tree as Americans do a sugar maple.

CHIMNEY FIRE AT O'REILLY'S

This morning at 10:30 o'clock firemen from the Central Truck Co. responded to a still alarm fire in the chimney of the store of William O'Reilly, news agent and stationer on Broadway, near the West Shore R. R. The fire was caused by the chimney being blocked by the soot, that is so easily formed from the soft and cannel coal now being used. The damage was very slight, but the store is without heat and the employers are wearing their street attire for the rest of the day.

Says the Tannersville Times:

The specialist is unable to say at this time if Mr. Baker will recover his hearing.

Circus in the Barn.

Isn't there some misapprehension about the proposal to build a "theater like a barn for young America?" Our own retrospection tells us that it was a circus that we had in the barn; a theater was altogether too complex and highbrow for us.

But a circus—any boy could manage that. All that was needed was a trapeze from the central rafters and a sprinkling of spangles on a carefully selected suit of undergarments; the spangles were made of silver and gilt paper, and, as we remember, had a way of letting go now and then like leaves in autumn, and flickering gently to earth.

Circuses are gone and barns are gone and leave just so much less of a foundation for one to get together upon with the boys of today. Fancy, giving a circus in a garage! Why, it doesn't even smell like a circus; while a good old family barn of twenty years' standing always did.

Not Only Gold From Alaska.

Alaska is not a gold country any more than a copper country or a farming country or a fishing territory. The exports from the land once called Seward's Folly exceed 1,000 million dollars, gold and copper leading the mineral exports, but fish amounting to as much as both gold and copper.

As a matter of fact, the value of fish and by-products exported from Alaskan waters amounts to about 50 million dollars a year. Unfortunately, the one thing that needed conservation more than anything else in Alaska never received real protection. As a result, during the last few years there has been a noticeable diminution of salmon pack—although the situation is not as serious as many calamity howlers would have us believe. The 1922 salmon pack was much greater than that of 1920 and 1921.—Sherman Rogers in the Outlook.

THE FRENCH HAT WITH 'EARS'

This odd little French hat has "ears" to fit over the puffs of hair at the side. The milliner embroiders black satin with gold and sets it with black cabochons to make the fascinating toque.

METALLIC FABRICS IN FAVOR

Metal Cloth Is Attractive Made Into Hats, Blouses, Girdles and Hand Bags.

The new metallic fabric, if used in moderation is really most attractive. We find hats, blouses, girdles and bags made of this lovely stuff.

To brighten the dark fur coat, what is more beautiful than a sheik turban of this beautiful brocade? Black with silver motifs, dull apricot and figures of old gold, blues and silver, and numerous other combinations are offered to suit one's individual taste. The turbans are small shapes and are wrapped around the head in the true Arabian style. No trimming is necessary, although long earrings will add considerable charm to the appearance.

To wear with a separate draped or plaited skirt, the bodice of metal cloth is more delightful, and forms the better half of a clever afternoon or informal dinner gown. The blouse should be simplicity itself, relying solely on the beauty of the material for its success. An oval neck, and sleeves of the kimono type, barely four inches long, are notable features of the newest blouses, and the bottom is finished with a broad crushed band that fits snugly over the hips at a rather low line.

Another type of blouse developed in brocaded metal cloth is the jacquette model that crosses in front, and may be made with long sleeves or none at all. These blouses form striking vests when worn with a suit or topcoat.

For evening wear the tinted metal cloth is well liked, and one may have her choice of silver or gold melting into orchid, pale green, peach, rose, turquoise blue or black. These gowns are made on the straightest of lines, and show the sleeveless bodice with round neck, cut high at the back. Sometimes the bodice is fitted with quaint charm and attached to a circular square skirt that dips gracefully at the sides.

FLAT CREPE HOLDS THE LEAD

Not Too Dull to Be Somber, and Not Too Bright to Be Ostentatious Is Feature.

Flat crepe has succeeded in becoming the first choice of the plain crepe for spring. It is almost possible to say that unless a dress is developed in one of the fancy fabrics like printed crepe de chine or brocaded or matelasse silk, then flat crepe is bound to be the medium.

Its affinity to crepe de chine—always a favorite—the white possessing the body and sturdiness of the heavier crepe canton, makes its vogue easily understood. It lends itself admirably to the draped silhouette, and is equally likable in the straight or plaited versions of the mode. The refined feeling that its luster—not too dull to be somber, and not too bright to be ostentatious—produces, is one of the outstanding qualities of the fabric.

Black and navy dresses are seen often in this fabric, and the colored interpretations are no less attractive. Almond green, peanut and henna are so lovely in it that the vogue of these colors seems indisputable.

LINE WILL BE THE QUESTION

Paris Plan Will Be to Give Figure More Fullness; Retain Youthful Silhouette.

Nineteen twenty-three brings a little larger skirt for women, notes a Paris fashion correspondent. Straight tunics will be worn only by young girls. Women will tire of the loose dresses and will pick models with more form than the clothes that have been shown during the past year.

The line will be the question. The problem is to give the figure more fullness without changing the youthful and agreeable silhouette of the last year's. The most fashionable fabrics of 1923 will be printed tissues, crepe de chine, mousseline, crepe georgette and satins of all colors.

It is certain that the fashionable gatherings of next summer will show a greater variety of colors than for years.

Plaited Skirts.

Accordion-plaited skirts in silk and satin are popular for wear with the new blouses that fasten low over the hips. Figured blouses or all-over embroidered ones seem the favorites.

Removing Label.

To easily and quickly remove a label from a bottle, wet the face of the label with water and hold for a moment over any convenient flame. The steam formed penetrates the label at once and softens the paste.

THE BLACK DRESS

Old Favorite Is to Be Popular Again This Spring.

Change in Silhouette Is Centered in the Sleeve—Frankly Quaint in Effect.

The variety of type expressions slated for spring wear appears to be infinitely greater than the lists of past seasons, writes a fashion correspondent. The supremacy of the black dress, regulated altogether upon the slim outlines that become the natural outcome of the flat, slinky crepes, was the chief reason for this steadfast and unswerving feeling. And to analyze the cause even one step further, the absolutism of black as the reigning color also fostered a certain kind of dress expression.

It is not to be expected that, even though this mode is spoken of as a waning one, that it will die altogether. It is intrenched too firmly as a mode—a type that every woman feels is one of the indispensables in her wardrobe. A black crepe dress, fashioned in the straight and panel relieved contour will hold its own in the fashion program for spring.

A newer idea that has sprung up, following hand in hand with the newer fabric presentations, is the dress that assumes lines and effects that are frankly quaint. This is a far cry from the tone of sophistication that underlies the long, slim black crepe frock. Even were one to have reviewed only the collections of the new spring fabrics, either in silk or woolen, the character of the prints and patterns which predominate immediately suggest the policy that will mark the new frocks.

The dress proper appears to have undergone little change in silhouette. The low waistline remains, although not so emphatically low placed. In some quarters designers are reckoning upon the skirt that introduces a hint of fullness, either as a result of shirred fullness or circular cut.

The most outstanding change in the silhouette is centered in sleeves. Long, tight ones of conventional tailored cut appear on the majority of those of the newest expression.

Black continues to be the favorite in millinery for dress wear, despite the many colored hats that are in every millinery salon, and while the larger models and the more intricate shapes have an important place, there are many moderate sizes and many hats of simple lines that are just as effective. They too, have all sorts of odd trimmings oddly arranged and they have quite as much the air of richness as the larger hats. The admiral hat, with its barrage of ostrich, is one of the much-liked hats. It is black and particularly suited to the statuesque woman.

CATCHY NEW SPRING OUTFIT

Very attractive is this Persian effect in self-tone crepe de chine bodice, with a very soft blue Poiret twill circular skirt, cuffs and collar. The hat is a Milan with a cocarde in navy ribbon to harmonize.

In the Spanish Mode.

Hair-dressing today has gone in for the Spanish mode, which, it may be added, is generally unbecoming to women outside of Spain. It requires the low forehead which northern races lack. The hair is drawn sleekly over the ears, only to rise in an extraordinarily high roll across the back of the head.

Better Than Patches in a Coat.

Should the lining of your coat show signs of wear under the arms, make neat silk dress shields to match your lining and sew carefully over the worn parts. A silk belt may be added over the lining if it is worn out at the waistline.

Tree Outlines.

The thing next in beauty to a tree in full leaf is a tree bare; its every exquisiteness of shape revealed, and its hold on the sky seeming so unspeakably assured; and, more than the beauty of shape and the outlining on sky, the solemn grace of prophecy and promise which every slender twig bears and reveals in its tiny gray buds. —Helen Hunt Jackson.

INDIVIDUAL EDUCATION.

The "overemphasis on education, and in particular on higher education, as the sole opening for the youth of the country," is objected to by the report of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching. The report means to suggest that too many parents send their children to college merely with the idea of advancing them in a social sense, and the result is that too many young men who might become successful mechanics or manual laborers are thrust into clerical or office jobs where they are less independent and out of which they can never hope to rise, even if they can stay on and keep a grip on their privilege of wearing white collars.

There is much point in this. We must have hewers of wood and drawers of water, to employ the Biblical phrase, for, if not, the wood will not be hewed, the water will not be drawn, and the country's industrial clock will stop. Ambition to rise is admirable and should be encouraged, but if we all should "rise," the country would be only head, with no arms, legs, feet or even body. We must have all classes of workers, and the ideal conditions are those under which every man engages in the work for which he is best fitted, whether it be professional, clerical or manual. But the Carnegie Foundation's suggested remedy for the tendency of which it complains has a very arbitrary and "un-American" sound. It would close secondary and higher education to those more fitted for manual trades. But who are the Daniels of judgment to decide what a youth is most fitted for until he has made the trial for himself? Where can the line be drawn definitely and readily enough, short of a fixing of castes and condemning a boy to follow his father's trade and confining him to the social level of his parents? Surely it would be better to continue in our old free way, with all the misfits resulting from it, than to adopt any new method approximating the European scheme of dividing the population into distinct classes and entrenching hereditary aristocracy in power.

Educational opportunity should be left free and open to all, as formerly. But there is another matter to which the Carnegie Foundation might address itself with some possibility of good results. American education on the whole is too machine-like in type; it is designed to deal with numbers in the mass rather than with individuals, and, though it accomplishes its general purpose, it results in a respectable level of mediocrity with too few developed minds of the higher type. This is especially true of the political field, wherein the lack of real leadership was never more marked than it is today and promises to be still more marked tomorrow. If a more individual system of education could be devised, if at least a few of the more promising youths could be trained individually instead of in mass, if they could be taught to think as well as supplied with knowledge, if they could be developed in the matter of initiative, invention, vision, the much desired fruit of leaders—great leaders at the best, genuine leadership at the least—might be less rare than it is at present. Whether this be feasible or not, it is worthy of thoughtful consideration, for the need is very great.

President Harding has been quoted as saying that his chief reason for voting for the Eighteenth amendment when in the Senate was his belief that it would take the drink question out of politics, but that the issue has not been according to his hopes. Certainly prohibition and politics are still badly mixed.

Bootleggers are usually assumed to be of the masculine gender, but a recent Washington dispatch states that "The lady bootlegger" is giving a great deal of trouble, presents a serious problem, and is rapidly increasing in number. Already 287 have been "sent up" and about 500 more are expected to be in no great while.

Governor Smith and his advisers may have all the expert knowledge in the world on traction affairs, but according to what is said of his public service bills if they become laws they will confuse every city in the state so far as trolley service is involved. Every city is given local control of a traction company whose lines operate wholly within that city. If they extend outside, however, then the state has authority over them. But the fact is practically every trolley company serves suburban districts and goes beyond city limits. Those who have some intelligent information on the subject predict confusion of the worst sort if the bills become laws.

What do you want to know about Nature Subjects? Send any questions of general interest to the Nature Notes Department of this paper, enclosing self-addressed and stamped envelope for reply.

Can You Answer These Questions?

1. What makes snakes shed their skin?
2. What birds feed in the air?
3. My goldfishes seem to make air bubbles at the top of the water. How can a fish blow out air if it doesn't breathe it in?

Answers in Tomorrow's Nature Notes

Answers To Previous Questions.

1. Can a pear scion be grafted on to an apple tree?

Yes, it can be done, and grows all right, but no very good supply of fruit has been noted in such experiments. The grafting may not be successful with every species, but there are some species in most genuses that will admit to grafting.

2. Do beavers mate for life?

It is generally believed they do, a beaver family consisting of an old pair and certain generations of their children. The first spring of married life there will be only one generation of children. These continue to live in the lodge for two years, or until their own third spring, when they leave, or are forced out, to mate and start a new household. Meantime the old pair have added new litters each spring, so that they usually have both young and half-grown offspring living with them.

3. How are carrier pigeons trained? How can they tell just where one wishes message carried to?

A "carrier" pigeon is simply a homing pigeon, and it takes messages only to its home, from the point where it is released. Nobody knows positively what sense or instinct guides the bird in its homeward flight. Training begins very early, young pigeons being carried a short distance from their cote, in company with old ones already trained, and the young follow their elders back to the cote and to a meal. Gradually the distance is increased, and in time the pupils learn to go home without aid, and from a distance.

COLONIALS PLAN A BUSY SEASON

Benny Borgman, Kingston's Star Basketball Player, Will be Given a Tryout—Charley Terpening Wants to Sign Up—Start Season April 15.

Monday afternion Manager Lou Brown held a conference with Benny Borgman, Kingston's star basketball forward, who is anxious to play with the Colonials this season. After talking the matter over Borgman agreed to come to Kingston as soon as weather conditions permit the start of spring practice and display his wares. He says he can play any position in the infield, but that last reason he covered short. If Borgman has the goods and he and Brown can agree on terms it is likely that he will be seen in a Colonial uniform.

Charley Terpening, of Newburgh, who played center field with the Colonials last season, is anxious to play here this season. He will meet with Manager Brown this afternoon and talk over terms and if they can get together he will again be seen in action here.

If weather conditions permit Manager Brown expects to open the baseball season here on April 15, at the Kingston Fair Grounds.

Work of lining up other players is under way and as soon as the complete lineup is signed it will be announced in The Freeman.

Billions for Buildings.

Even though, during the war, we grew accustomed to quoting enormous figures, it is somewhat startling to see big figures applied to matters of peace. One doesn't ordinarily speak of the home in billions. It was arresting, then, to pick up a recent report from Roger Babson and read the prognostication that statistician makes. He says that the total amount of new construction in the United States this year probably will exceed $5,000,000,000. Five billions. And of this sum it is estimated that half will be spent in the building of residences. Two and a half billion dollars' worth of homes.—House and Garden.

Underground Ice Cave Opened.

In the Tannengebirge, or Pine mountains, on the outskirts of Salzburg, known to the musical world because of Mozart's connection with it, lies a subterranean ice field. It is merely a gigantic room in the interior of a mountain, the floor, walls and ceilings of which consist of solid ice. Being at an elevation of 2,000 feet, unexposed, and open only at the entrance made by man, and that quite recently, the ice is reputed to be the oldest south of the Arctic or north of the Antartic circle. Sixteen miles of it have already been explored, though less than a mile has been made ready for visitors. The explored part has been provided with acetylene and magnesium lights, which makes uneven spots in the surface, lateral or overhead, stand out like giants.

NOVELTY WOULD WEAR OFF

Boss Had Right Idea as to How to Do Away With Excitement in Office.

He had been getting to work late with such regularity that the boss' ire was aroused and so he resolved to begin arriving at the office more punctually. Anyhow, all the standard alibis, such as the alarm clock failing to ring, the crowded street cars passing him up at his corner, were about worn out in his case.

And so one morning all week he drifted with attempted nonchalance into the office among the early arrivals. The others of the office staff at once set up a clamor.

"What's the matter, couldn't you sleep last night?" some asked.

"He probably was out all night and hasn't gone home yet," others remarked.

"The clock at his house must have been an hour fast this morning," said another of the gang.

Then the target of all these remarks became indignant. Going to the boss' desk, he made his complaint.

"If it is going to cause so darn much excitement for me to get down on time, I guess I had better be late every day," he said.

"Nope," said the boss, without looking up from his work. "Get down on time every morning and you won't cause any excitement."

Washing Railroad Cars.

Specially adapted for washing railway cars while they are in motion, a machine, described in Popular Mechanics Magazine, is constructed with a long vertical rotating brush, and on each side of it radially swinging squeegees, all arranged so that they move automatically out of the way of protruding parts on the car sides. One of these washers stands on each side of the railway track, and, when the train approaches, the operator depresses a lever handle and the brush and squeegees immediately come into contact with the car side and windows. The brush is rotated by an electric motor, and a cleansing fluid is discharged into the brush, followed by jets of fresh water. This is then wiped off by the squeegees.

DIAMOND TOWN IN AFRICA

Luderitzbucht, Thoroughly Teutonic in Every Way, Has Vast Store of the Precious Gems.

Only diamonds account for the existence of the African city of Luderitzbucht. The workings have just been reopened for the first time since 1914.

It was characteristic of the Germans to have built a solid Teuton city on a barren coast. They did everything thoroughly. Luderitzbucht has electric light, splendid government buildings and a cinema theater.

The shops are crammed with goods imported direct from Germany. Prices are far cheaper than in the neighboring Union of South Africa, and you can buy anything you want on the spot—with British money, of course. Marks are laughed at.

Yet not a blade of grass nor a tree will grow within a hundred miles of the place. Every drop of fresh water has to be distilled. The citizens do not drink much water. They make excellent beer.

The brown sandhills of the coastal belt, where Luderitzbucht stands, are rich in diamonds. Only the other day a woman picked up a valuable gem in front of her home in the main street of the city. By law she was compelled to hand it over.

Just outside the city are the diamond fields—verboten areas where notices warn the visitor against trespassing. Here thousands of natives will soon be at work sifting the surface gravel. Diamonds are found in these parts without much digging.

No taxicabs ply for hire in the sandy streets of Luderitzbucht. All transport is by trolleys drawn by mules and running on narrow-gauge lines. Every home has its own little branch line running into the back yard.

Dust storms scream through the city every morning. Otherwise the climate is very healthful and even pleasant.

Luderitzbucht has its seaside resort. The Germans call it Ostende, but it is very unlike its European namesake. A cluster of bathing huts on the shores of a lagoon and the inevitable beer hall. That is all.—L. R. Green in the Continental Edition of the London Mail.

Cousin Jane Knew.

Cousin Jane, of the Shortridge high school physiology class, went to the country to visit her Uncle Bob for a few days. Uncle Bob took her out to look at the chickens. "We've got a lot of them," he confided, "but we get mighty few eggs. Your Aunt Sue feeds them too much, but I don't know how to tell her what she's doing without hurting her feelings. She's so touchy, you know."

Cousin Jane went into the house. A little later she drew Aunt Sue into a conversation about the hens. "I believe, Aunt Sue, you'd get better work from those hens if you would diet them," she finally blurted out her advice.—Indianapolis News.

Definite Command.

Rosalie and Jack had quite a serious snow fight, Jack coming out victor and leaving Rosalie in a heap on the sidewalk, bedraggled and sniffling. Rosalie was furious, and as she got up and started for the house she called after Jack, "Don't you dare to come back in my yard until never."

Harnessing Geysers.

With the possibility of development of 2,000,000 horse power from a source hitherto never considered, Pacific coast railroads soon may be able to electrify their entire systems.

The new power, now under investigation, is that of heat and pressure of the internal earth itself and it will be tapped at points where it already penetrates to the surface in the form of geysers.

In the geyser fields of Sonoma county a test well recently was drilled which has developed 2,000 horse power. The company making the experiment, said to be controlled largely by the Southern Pacific, has leased a tract of land ten miles long through the geyser country on which could be sunk 1,000 wells capable of developing a possible 2,000,000 horse power, or enough to run every train on the coast, move the wheels in every factory, and still have a big surplus without touching the water power or oil resources.

The cost of geyser power would be only the cost of transmission and the supply is said to be practically inexhaustible.

Reggie—Yes. I've been quite successful with it, you know. Five girls have worn it already, and all I've paid on the thing so far is six dollars now.

"War Lords" Yield Kitchen.

The field kitchen of William Hohenzollern, which followed the former kaiser in all his wanderings about Europe during the war, has been sent to the United States. The trophy is to be added to a notable collection of war relics in Washington.

Fan Saves Coal.

Long Island commuters, who are among those hardest hit by the coal shortage, have adopted many expedients to eke out their supplies and to make the utmost of what fuel they have.

One of them tested an idea with so much success that many other users of hot-air furnaces are following his example. He closed the damper of his intake pipe, shutting off all air from the outside, and placed a small electric fan in the cold-air duct between the outer wall of the cellar and the furnace.

The fan drives the hot air into his room heated to a much higher temperature than it formerly was when drawn from outdoors.

He says the cost of running the fan is of no account compared with the improvement in the heating of the house.—New York Sun.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

SAUCY SYNURA

"I am going to tell you a story this evening," said Daddy, "about the Saucy Synura colony."

"Not Very Pleasant."

"Oh, Daddy!" exclaimed Nancy. "Now, really! Why, I haven't the slightest idea what you are talking about. I won't understand the story at all."

"I know what saucy means," said Nick, "and a colony is a kind of group."

"Well, knowing two out of three words is a fairly good percentage," said Daddy.

"But, of course, I will explain to you what Synura means. For I didn't know myself until only recently when I heard about them and their city visit."

"So they're city people, are they?" asked Nancy.

"Well, I'd hardly call them city people," said Daddy. "But we'll hear what they are right away.

"Synura are little creatures halfway between animals and plants. They are spindle-shaped and attach themselves in a colony, for they always live in numbers. They are light green in color.

"They give off a kind of an oil in the springtime, which makes the water taste fishy; but they do not make it unhealthful—only not very pleasant!

"Scientists, or men who understand science, say they have been on the earth for thousands and thousands of years, so it must be said for them that they belong to an old family.

"When a colony has reached the number of forty or fifty individuals it splits up and forms other colonies.

"It takes a thousand colonies to make any fishy oil taste.

"Now, usually every spring, as I've said, the Synura become active and do a little sporting about—so that the fishy taste has been noticed before.

"Whether the Synura are active in other places I've not found out, but in this particular city I have in mind the Synura become busy every springtime.

"Yet the water is perfectly pure and fresh and good.

"Well, this year, what do you suppose the Synura did?

"I'm sure one could never guess what a Synura or a lot of them might do!

"They decided they'd be fashionable and that 'they needed a change,' so they began to be active right in the middle of the winter, and the city water began then to taste fishy.

"People would boil the water so it would taste better, and I heard of a family of goldfish whose mistress boiled their water, too, for they didn't like the fishy taste, even though they were fish themselves.

"Oh, yes, when the fishy taste was so noticeable at first these goldfish lost all their energy and interest in life, and when their water was boiled for them they began to enjoy themselves once more.

"But the Synura were very bothersome. People would say to each other:

"'How is the water today; very bad, or a little better?'

"And here were the Synura having such a good time in their saucy synura style and saying, as they stretched themselves about:

"'We needed a change earlier this year.'

"And after I had heard about the Synura I made up a few verses about them for you children.

"Began to Enjoy Themselves."

"Here are the verses:

The Synura is very gay,
The Synura is out to play,
What cares the Synura if it tastes fishy?
What cares the Synura, I say?

The Synura came ahead of time,
The Synura tho't it was sublime
To tease the city people so.
That's truth, as well as rhyme!

The Synura wanted to get acquainted,
Even if the water they tainted,
Though that's a slight exaggeration—
They're not as bad as they're painted!

They're really harmless; that is why
The little Synura did sigh,
"We'll have to give the people a surprise."
And they did!

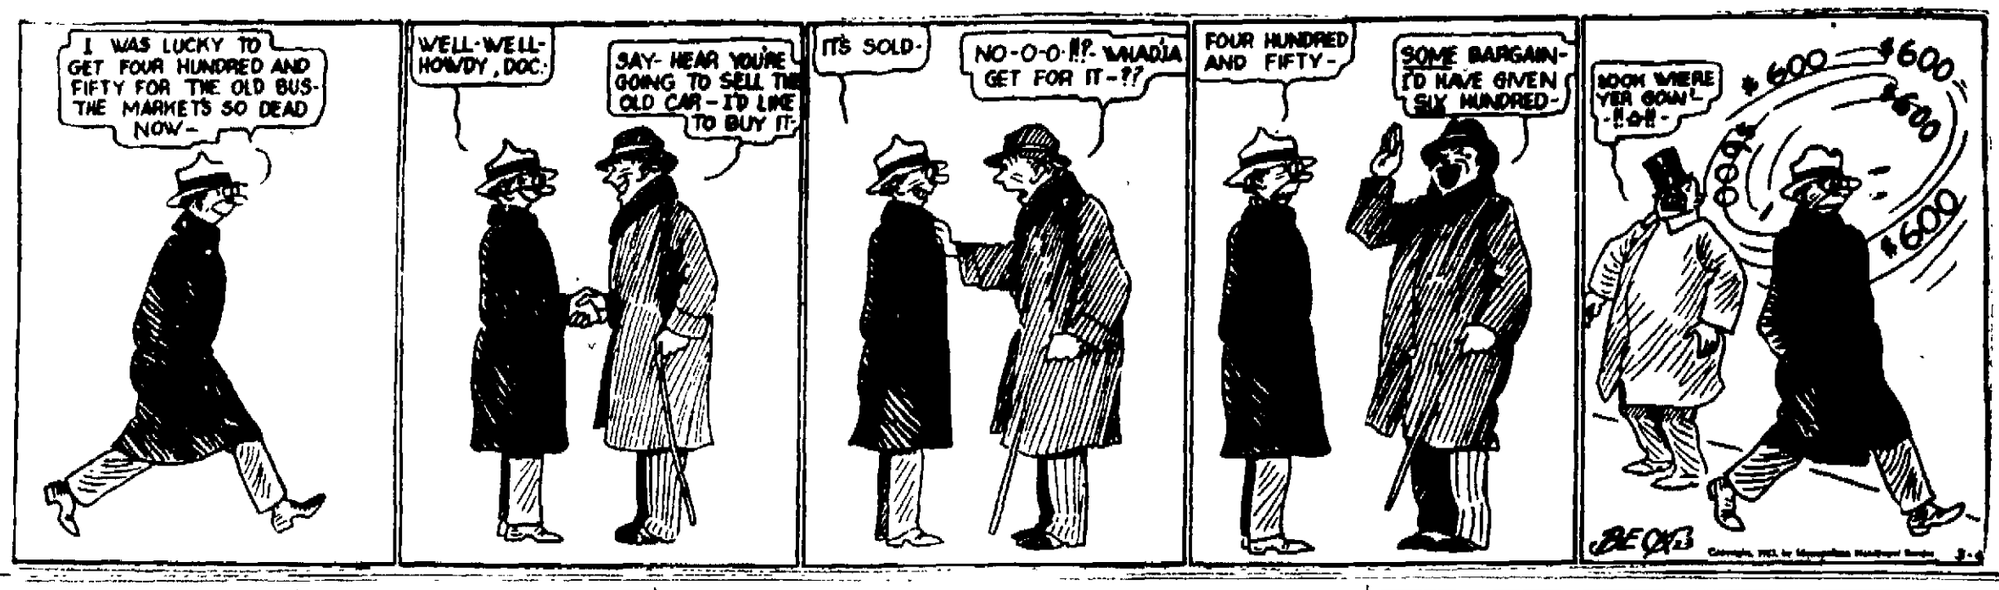
GAS BUGGIES—It's Thinks Like This That Make Life Weary



THE KITCHEN CABINET

(©, 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

Let us be better men!
Let us find things to do
Saner and sweeter, yet
Higher and nobler and true.

COME TO DINNER!

The housewife who has members of her family with flagging appetites which must be catered to, is not so fortunate as she who has husky ones and the only problem is to furnish quantity; however, in all homes such times will come and it is necessary to meet these conditions with a reserve of ideas which will give variety to the meals.

Potatoes are the common staple food and with the three or more hundred ways of serving them we should reasonably expect to have them prepared in other ways than baked and boiled and mashed and fried. The following is a way to serve them which will appeal to the appetite and give a pleasant change:

Spanish Potatoes.—Boil potatoes as usual, using the small even-sized ones. In the serving dish which is hot, put two tablespoonfuls each of butter and finely-minced onion, turn in the hot potatoes which have been drained and shaken over the heat, to remove all moisture, salt and chop the potatoes, turning and mixing them well with the butter and onion. Serve hot, at once.

Cabbage is one of our good winter vegetables, available throughout the year—is rich in vitamines, mineral salts and furnishes bulk which is needed to cleanse the alimentary canal. Twice a week is not too often to serve cabbage; oftener is better. Cabbage is more valuable uncooked. It is good as a salad, as cold slaw, or cooked and served with a dressing of butter, milk and a few crumbed crackers.

A most tasty salad, which is simple, cheap and easy to prepare is this:

Cabbage Salad.—Chop one small head of cabbage with one medium-sized onion. Fry a slice of salt pork cut into very small cubes, pour over the fat, reserving the browned cubes for garnishing the top of the salad. Season well with salt and pepper, and into the frying pan add a little vinegar; when boiling hot pour over the cabbage which has been well-mixed with the fat. The amount of fat and vinegar will be determined by the size or amount of cabbage used. The dressing should be enough to season and moisten well with none to drain away.

SMITH'S MESSAGE ON WATER POWER

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Asks $75,000 to Push State's Action to Determine its Rights Over Big Rivers—St. Lawrence and Niagara Power For All in State—Would Make Existing Transmission Lines Common Carriers.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, March 6.—Declaring that the St. Lawrence and Niagara rivers are capable of furnishing sufficient electrical power for the needs of every resident of the state, and that the energy can easily be transmitted to every municipality, Governor Smith has sent a special message to the legislature urging state development and control of the waterpower resources.

The message is as follows:

To The Legislature:

In my first message to the Legislature, I spoke about the necessity for the development of our water power. Our resources in this direction excel any other state in the Union. The Niagara river on the west and the St. Lawrence on the north furnish power possibilities of immense value. The flow of these rivers is unusually uniform compared with other streams of the state. They stand alone so far as the quantity of available power is concerned. These two rivers are capable of furnishing sufficient firm primary basic power to serve the needs of all of our people. Electrical energy from these streams can be transmitted to every municipality in the state. The art of electrical transmission has advanced to that extent. There is a very urgent demand for such energy everywhere for light, heat and power. Our municipalities need it for light; our industries demand it for power.

The state should develop these power resources on these rivers and transmit energy created thereby to every municipality over transmission lines owned and controlled by the state. Under proper management, the state can develop these powers cheaper than private corporations. This is obvious from the fact that the state is enabled to secure funds for such development at a much lower rate of interest than private capital. This would enable our municipalities to secure an abundance of firm primary basic power for distribution in such manner as they may determine at approximately the cost of production and delivery. The ultimate consumer would be able to secure this power at the lowest possible price.

I recommend:

First: That appropriate legislation be enacted to carry out this policy, which means the immediate development by the state of the undeveloped water powers available on the Niagara and St. Lawrence. We should at the same time provide means for the transmission and sale to the municipalities of the electrical energy thereby created. Provision should be made for beginning the work immediately. To do this will require an adequate appropriation of public funds made immediately available.

I recommend:

Second: That the state engineer be clothed with the power and charged with the duty of beginning development work at once by the most economical plan that will contemplate development and distribution to municipalities by the best methods known. Ample authority should be conferred upon him to enter upon negotiations with the federal government for consent to develop hydro-electric power on these streams consistent with its control over these waters for navigation.

I recommend

Third: That pending the development of all these powers, existing transmission lines should be declared common carriers by law and compelled to transmit electrical energy at a reasonable price.

I recommend:

Fourth: That no further permits or licenses for the development of power should be granted to any private corporation. The surest way to bring this about is to repeal any statute creating any commission, board or officer already vested with any such authority. Any statute heretofore enacted conferring upon commissions, boards, bodies of any kind, power to grant any right, leave or license to develop water powers that belong to the state should be instantly repealed.

I recommend:

Fifth: That seventy-five thousand dollars ($75,000) be made immediately available to the Attorney-General to enable him to defray the expenses of the action now pending and begun by the state and federal government designed to determine the right, control and jurisdiction of the state over the navigable waters within its border for power development.

This action should be prosecuted with the utmost care, vigor and dispatch in order that this vital question be finally determined. We have already delayed too long. While we have been debating and bickering over the enactment of laws for the progressive development of our great water power under state ownership and control, the federal government has enacted a water power law which challenges our right, authority and jurisdiction over the navigable waters of our state in all matters relating to power development.

The Federal Government contends that it has the right, authority and jurisdiction to control and dictate by license how, when and where developments are to be made on the Niagara and St. Lawrence rivers, as well as all other navigable streams of the state. Such right and authority, if sustained, would enable the Federal Government to deprive the state of New York and its people of this priceless heritage bestowed upon us by the Creator himself. In the final analysis it would permit the Federal Government to divert the energy created by the fall of water in our streams to other states against our will. The bed of our streams over which power-creating water flows belongs to the state or, better still, to its citizens. Our use and control of the same is threatened. I am credibly advised that a strong and determined propaganda is now being spread in support of a plan to divert the electrical energy from our border streams to territory outside the state. This we must resist with all the power that we can bring to our command.

No pending public opinion is of more moment to the people of this state than the development of this great resource. It has been exploited in the past in the interest of private corporations that have operated it for private gain. What remains of it must be developed in accordance with the enlightened thought of today, and that I take it to be by the state itself, under state ownership and state control, to the end that all of the people may be able to realize the individual benefit which should flow to them from their own resources and their own property.

After investigation now in progress with respect to the development of power from surplus canal waters at Crescent and Vischer Ferry, I shall take occasion to address you further upon that subject.

NEWBURGH NEWS EXPLAINS ITS BRIDGE ATTITUDE

Headed "Poughkeepsie Not Fair Anent Bridge," a Newburgh News editorial says:

"Public sentiment in this state is overwhelmingly in favor of the bridge project," says the Poughkeepsie Star. "We say this in full knowledge of the fact. The Newburgh News has come out editorially in opposition to the Poughkeepsie highway bridge and declared 'if the state has any money to spend on free bridges it should give it to the Bear Mountain project.' The latter is not planned as a free bridge but as a toll proposition—with an added clause in the charter 'permitting' the state to buy the bridge for $4,500,000. But all the rest of the imperial state of New York wants the Poughkeepsie bridge, which will be a real structure and not a speculative proposition of the 'made to sell' variety." The esteemed Star might at least have the fairness to do justice to the aims and intentions of the persons who are putting up millions to build the Bear Mountain bridge. They are planning the structure, not selfishly to benefit some small city, as the promoters of Poughkeepsie bridge are planning their project, but to provide access to the great interstate park on the west shore of the Hudson for the millions of inhabitants of New York city and incidentally to expedite business traffic and tourist travel along the river. The bridge is being built not to sell but to serve. We venture to say the traffic over the structure will be 200 to 500 per cent greater than that over the Poughkeepsie bridge, provided the latter should be built also. We admire Poughkeepsie energy and persistency in boosting its bridge and congratulate in on the results. At the same time, its campaign has not been entirely above-board. Through various agencies it has importuned state-wide bodies to endorse the bridge, citing in support of the project the needs of the entire central and lower Hudson regions, and in many instances it has secured endorsement. But in asking and securing such endorsement Poughkeepsie has entirely ignored the Bear Mountain Bridge, which is assured despite the bitter opposition of Poughkeepsie's representatives at the legislative hearing on the project. It has kept its supporters and would-be supporters in ignorance of the steps being taken, entirely without expense to the state, to meet the traffic needs on which it places so much stress.

Don't use the whip on tired nerves — it means trouble

Ask any doctor for the facts.

You can't over-draw energy without paying.

Coffee contains the nerve-stimulating drug, caffeine. When coffee is used to overcome fatigue, it means whipping the tired nerves into a run.

You may seem to get added strength—but there's a settlement coming for an overdrawn account.

Take care!

Rest is the cure for fatigue. Health is the equipment for hard tasks.

Rest and health are interfered with when nerves are over-stimulated.

You've seen plenty of proof. How many people do you know who say, "I have to go slow on coffee; it keeps me awake nights?"

How is it in your own case? Have you counted restless night hours after the evening cup of coffee?

Treat your health sensibly that you may meet your task capably.

Don't try to draw strength from overdriven nerves. That way lies weakness. Don't increase over-work by using stimulants. You are merely postponing and increasing the penalties.

Be fair to yourself!

For a hot, comforting beverage, drink Postum and let nerves have their natural rest.

There's charm without harm in Postum—a delightful, satisfying cereal beverage; rich, seal-brown in color, delicious in flavor and aroma, and containing nothing that can irritate nerves or disturb health. Postum is safe and enjoyable for every member of the family.

Thousands who formerly used coffee or tea, and began to pay the penalties of nerve-stimulation, now use Postum and praise its comforting goodness.

The road to health is a good road for anybody to follow.

Your grocer sells Postum in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages) for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared; made by boiling fully 20 minutes.

WAR HERO IS NOW FIRE HERO

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, March 6.—Special commendation will be received by Patrolman John Dale, a World War hero, for his action in rescuing ten persons, including six children and two women, from a burning building in Brooklyn last night, it was announced by police department officials today. Dale saw smoke coming from the second floor, turned in an alarm, and then plunged into the smoke-filled hallway.

He made three trips into the flaming building, his head shielded from fire and smoke by his coat.

None of the tenants were injured.

Dale was a member of the 165th infantry, the "Fighting Sixty-ninth," during the war, and won the Croix de Guerre for capturing a German machine gun at Chateau Thierry. He received 11 wounds before capturing the gun and was cited for gallantry by General Pershing.

THE HONEYMOON

By ADELAIDE R. KEMP

(©, 1923, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Hello, little boy; what's your name?" Shirley straightened from her weeding and looked at the lad standing by the fence.

"William Theodore Curtis, Jr.," was the dignified response.

"I suppose you must belong to the folks just moved in the big house on the hill, William?"

"You needn't call me William if you don't want to," said the boy, taking a jack-knife out of his pocket and whittling a willow stick he was holding. "Nobody calls me that except the teacher. I'm Billy to most folks."

"Well, then, Billy"—Shirley came nearer nearer and looked intently at the small face with its freckle-powdered nose—"I wonder whether you have anyone related to you named Thomas Curtis?"

"You probably mean my Uncle Tom. He's down in Panama." Billy, with his whistle nearly completed, did not notice the color that came with a blinding rush to Shirley's face. "Do you know," he continued, "what a honeymoon couple is?"

"Well," she answered slowly, "a honeymoon couple are two very happy people, generally, on their wedding trip. What made you ask that, Billy?"

"Oh, nothing much. I was just kind of wondering. When Dad read Uncle Tom's last letter he laughed and said he didn't know what we'd do ith a honeymoon couple. You know, Uncle Tom's coming home in a week or two."

Shirley looked as if she had received a blow. Billy, bidding her good-by, started down the road, his whistle sounding shrilly.

Such a slight misunderstanding had sent Tom Curtis to Panama and lost to her all chances of happiness.

For Shirley the following weeks were trying ones. She and Billy became fast friends, but she dreaded the day when he would tell her Tom and his bride had arrived. William Theodore Curtis, Jr., in his characteristic manner, abruptly ended her suspense late one afternoon as he met her returning from the post office.

"They've come," he shouted, when he was within calling distance. "They're what you said they were and dad says she's pretty nifty."

Shirley stopped short and sat down rather quickly on a convenient rock. "Well, Billy," she said, trying to regain her composure, "I suppose you won't have time to fish for a while."

"Oh, yes, I will," exclaimed the lad quickly. "All they want to do is to sit in the hammock or dance to the old phonograph. They don't pay any attention to me. They did say," he added, "that we might go on a picnic next Saturday in our car. I wish you might come, too."

Shirley smiled rather forlornly. "It's my own fault that I can't," she said, whimsically.

Late Saturday, walking through the village, she passed a group of people talking excitedly. Fragments of their conversation made her pause suddenly. "The young married couple were taken to the hospital, terribly hurt." "Yes. Curtis' big car—they'd been on a picnic somewhere."

Shirley hurried on. Her whole being seemed permeated with the tragedy that had entered her life. Down the road came the hum of a big car. It came up, but did not pass her, and somebody jumped out and clasped her in a pair of strong arms. She looked up with a white face and clutched their owner convulsively.

"Oh, Tom, Tom!" was all she could say. Everything had been clean-swept from her mind except the outstanding fact that he was there. Tom was returning the clutch with interest.

"Shirley," he said, "what luck! I've been up to town every day since I came, doing regular detective work. Your house was closed, your folks gone, and nobody knew where you were except in the country somewhere for your health."

To Shirley suddenly came the reason for her run-down state and shattered nerves. She tried to draw herself away, but it was useless.

"Tom, you mustn't. You're married, you know. And I thought you and your little wife were in the hospital."

Tom sat down on the running-board of the car, but he did not let go his hold of Shirley. "Now, Shirley Dinsmore, will you kindly tell me where your wires are crossed?"

Shirley felt ready to cry when the realization that all the joy of meeting Tom must end at once. "I've just heard about the accident today, and Billy told me you were on your honeymoon," she said.

A light of understanding appeared on Tom's face. "Well, I'll be jiggered," he said. "Shirley, did you think I could forget like that? My cousin Dick and his wife came with me on their honeymoon. Billy probably didn't take the trouble to mention any names. They were in an accident today, but, thank goodness, not so serious as reported."

"Honeymoon!" Tom lifted her face, from which a great shadow had vanished. "You just bet I'm going on my honeymoon—the minute you'll join the party."

"Uncle Tom, I've just heard what you said. Once you told me the moon was made of green cheese; now I suppose you'll try to make me believe it's made of honey."

NO COMPENSATION IN FALL ON WRONG SIDE OF FENCE

Referee John J. Blackford of the State Workmen's Compensation Commission handed down decisions Monday awarding Mrs. Anna Terwilliger of Wallkill $8 a month for two months for a broken leg received when she fell on the ice and refusing Mrs. Frances Picard of Newburgh compensation for injuries received in the same manner.

The reason for the difference in the decisions is that Mrs. Terwilliger fell inside the fence surrounding the plant of the Wallkill Manufacturing Company, where she is employed, while Mrs. Picard fell just outside the plant of the Crawshaw Carpet Company in Newburgh. The referee held, therefore, that Mrs. Picard was not injured in the course of her employment.

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of Ira Thompson, who departed life March 6, 1921.

In a nearby graveyard,
Where the trees their branches wave,
Lies our loving father
In a cold a gloomy grave,
You will rest until we meet again
Upon that wondrous shore,
Where partings are forgotten
And sorrow is no more.
Those willing hands, that loving heart
At rest from toil and pain,
Sleep on dear father
Until we meet again.
WIFE AND DAUGHTERS.

In loving memory of Mrs. Henry F. DeWitt, who died March 6, 1922.

Mother is gone but not forgotten,
Never will her memory fade,
Loving thoughts will always linger,
Around the grave where she is laid
Just when her thoughts were the brightest,
Just when her hopes were the best,
She was called from this world of sorrow,
To the home of eternal rest.

MULLER WINS JUDGING HONORS

This year for the first time a stock judging contest for state agricultural schools was held in connection with the annual farmers' week at Ithaca. Teams consisting of three men from the different state schools were present and the competition was keen.

The contestants judged three rings of cattle and two rings of swine and were given twenty minutes to place and write up reasons for each ring. The rings were composed of four animals and there were two rings of Holsteins, one of Jerseys, one of Berkshires and one of Duroc Jerseys.

Silver loving cups were awarded the three winning teams and a gold medal was given to the highest individual score for judging cattle and swine. Morrisville received first, having the highest score. Cobleskill was second and Delhi third. D. C. Rogers of Morrisville and Ed Muller of Delhi State School carried off the individual honors for cattle and swine respectively.

A dinner was given for the members of the teams and coaches after which the prizes were awarded.

BIT OF OLD CIVILIZATION

Ancient Temple Proves Art of Forgotten Race—Discoveries of Interest to Archeologists.

A faint glimpse of a civilization so long forgotten that no memory of it exists except in a temple of gigantic proportions and some inscriptions giving the names of kings was given in a talk on "The Mysterious Temple of Angkor Wat in Cambodia" by Langdon Warner at the University museum, reports the Philadelphia Ledger.

The lecturer showed pictures of the temple and surrounding country and explained that it was possible to go up the side porches and finally into some of the corridors of the temple itself without getting off one's elephant, if taking that mode of exercise, so large and spacious are the apartments and approaches to them.

The Cambodians originally came from southern India, during the first four centuries after Christ, bringing with them a wealth of Indian traditions, which is evident from the worship of Siva and Vishnu. The native Cambodians know nothing of their ancestors who built the temple, and explain the existence of these buildings as being the work of the gods.

There are civilizations much earlier than that of Cambodia of which much more perfect records exist, the lecturer said, and the reason that archeologists are delving into the mysteries of Cambodia is the strong evidence of there having lived in that section a highly cultured race, so far as culture may be interpreted by the fine arts. "We know nothing of their cruelties and the injustice of their social system, their filth and folly," he said, "because such things perish with the passing of the centuries, but their knowledge of architecture and their artistic skill was remarkable."

Wizardry in Plants.

Luther Burbank spake and said to himself, Lo, what profiteth a wheat stack a cubit tall and only four inches of it wheat? So he has developed, we read, a wheat stalk with head a foot in length and grains of wheat as large as beans. As a horticulturist and husbandman, he is a magician. He does not rub Aladdin's lamp, he is the genie of the lamp himself.

If wheat grains as large as beans, why not, after a while, as large as peanuts? "In those days there were giants;" in our day agriculture has produced the gigantic. Any county fair will prove it. Pumpkins grown to the size of Cinderella's coach and apples of a magnitude suitable to the Greek goddesses who fought over one.

Two bites of a cherry is only a proverb. The fact has made it quite possible; and as for strawberries they are now built with a leanto. Yes, a strawberry of the newest pattern has lobes, and a single plant has sold for $50,000.

The vegetable world, compared to its former fruitfulness, now brings forth some twenty, some forty and some an hundred fold. We never fear for the food supply of the world, so long as there are Luther Burbanks amongst us.

Airplane Warning Signal.

The purpose of an automatic signal device, recently invented, is to give warning of the approach of an airplane, which usually descends to the ground with engine shut off, to persons who may be on the landing field. The device, according to an illustrated article in Popular Mechanics, is provided with suitable levers and rods so as to be under the control of the pilot, and is mounted on a bracket within the fuselage and arranged to be swung out through an opening when it is desired to signal. The force of the air passing in through the bell-shaped mouth of the horn rotates an air motor that can be adapted to drive a siren or other type of signal.

Assuredly Russian.

The fair young thing tripped into the public library and said she would like to get a certain book but couldn't remember its name. She knew it was a Russian novel, however, and the attendant obligingly named a number of Russian novels. But this didn't bring the answer. So the fair young thing pondered.

"I know it's a Russian novel," musingly.

"Yes, miss."

"But what is it? Oh, goody! Now I have it," she declared.

"And the name?"

"Martin Chuzzlewitz."

Lure Quarry to Kill Itself.

In some parts of the north of Scotland the gannet, or solan goose, is captured for the sake of its feathers. These birds hover 50 to 60 feet above the surface of the sea, diving from time to time after fish that show themselves near the top. They are caught by means of herrings tied to flat boards. The bird sees the fish but does not notice the board. Diving from a great height it kills itself by striking its head against the plank.

Remarkable Clock.

An ingenious clockmaker of Marseilles, France, has converted an ordinary alarm clock into a very complete astronomical clock, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Without altering the main functions and with slight additions, except for a new face, the clock has been made to indicate, on a small dial at the bottom: The phases and age of the moon, the hours of its passage of the meridian, its position in the zodiac, the position of the sun in the heavens, its ascension and declination, the equinoxes, solstices and seasons, and on the dial at top he has added an arc upon which a special hand denotes the hour at which the sun passes the meridian, the hours of sunrise and sunset for all the days of the year and the length of the days and nights are given at the right, and sidereal time at the left.

Treating Diseases of Plants.

It appears from testimony afforded by scientists, both in the United States and abroad, that we are face to face with the possibility of treating some of the diseases of plants in a way similar to that in which animals are rendered immune to attacks of illness. In this relation there may be cited the experiments of Beauverie, who permitted cuttings of begonia to grow in earth impregnated with a species of fungus which is an attenuated form of the botrytis cinerea, a destructive parasite of plants. After impregnation the begonia plants were subjected to attack by the parasite and resisted it perfectly. Similar results have been obtained by other experimenters.

Censor Japanese School Books.

The International Educational association of Japan has decided to investigate the Japanese national readers, history, geography and music of the primary schools of various countries to make a comparison and strike out from Japanese books whatever is detrimental to the cultivation of international ideals and sentiments. The tone of the Japanese text books is regarded as decidedly jingoistic.

Explanations in Order.

One morning recently I went across the street and was to come back to the corner, meet my husband, and go down town with him. Seeing a man coming out of our court, I began to motion frantically. He sauntered along but I kept it up, so he started to run. When he caught up to me I saw I had never laid eyes on him.—Exchange.

CASH MILLER ON INVENTIONS

"Everybody's Just Living From One Push Button to the Next," Is Philosopher's Idea.

I see where some bird has invented a simple little device consistin' of eight or nine syllables which is used for to send pitchers of the human voice by radio. Science an' invention is violatin' all speed laws these days. Next thing we know somebody'll invent a machine for broadcastin' the taste of what y' eat fer supper.

All the guys that used to write dime novels has turned to inventin', declares Cash Miller in Thrift.

In the old days when a man in New York wanted to talk to a man in Pittsburgh, the best he could do was ride through on a horse, an' by the time he'd went as far as Philadelphia he'd fergot what he wanted to say an' turned back. Now you can pose fer a photograph of what you gotta say an' they'll ship it through by wireless.

They ain't no distinction in bein' a good liar any more. Machinery is stranger than fiction.

It only seems like yesterday that most people thought the radio was somethin' fer to rub on the joints.

Necessity is the mother of invention, as the guy says when he invented the bathtub.

Every time I take a ride on a train they've invented some new way of hidin' the soap in the washroom. The newspaper y'r readin' today is the shirt that the laundry held out on y' Saturday night.

I'm expectin' any day to hear that the fountain pen has begun leadin' a double life.

I can remember as well as if it was only last week the first time I was ever stepped on by a low-flyin' taxicab. Yes, this is a fast age.

Yesterday's novelty is today's nuisance. Everybody's just livin' from one push button to the next.

The old cuckoos that rode high bicycles an absorbed their coffee from mustache cups thought they was the cat's fore-finger, but don't kid y'rself. Some day the mere mention of broadcastin' 'll be the hottest joke of the village cut-up.

Only Brave Deserve the Fair.

My youthful lover had to pass the cemetery to come to my house. I found out he hired another fellow to come with him and wait outside, as he was afraid to go by the cemetery alone. It ended my love affair, as every maid loves a brave man.—Chicago Journal.

IN ODD RUNAWAY

Young Frenchman's Perilous Trip High in the Air.

Satisfied That He Is Alive to Tell of It, Since He Never Will Be Closer to Death.

A runaway balloon is a bit like a runaway horse. Whenever it starts you ought to be either all the way on or all the way off. M. Clinckmaille, the young French artilleryman whom Mr. J. B. Branureth quotes in the Wide World Magazine, had "only one foot in the stirrup" when his balloon broke loose. But he was not the only one that the "flying horse" tricked.

There were, says M. Clinckmaille, two guide ropes on the balloon, and each was held by five of us. As we moved forward to the motor windlass the right-hand rope snapped. Released from the restraint of five pairs of hands, the balloon instantly lifted us who were on the left-hand rope off our feet and carried us into the air before we knew what had happened.

The three men nearest the end of the line immediately slid down and dropped to the earth. The fourth man, poor fellow, had somehow got the rope twisted once round his forearm; by the time he was free and had jumped the balloon was perhaps 90 feet from the ground.

No doubt I, too, would have tried to jump but that, when the rope suddenly drew taut, I was thrown backward, and my right leg became entangled in the guide rope, so that I was carried into the air head downward with arms outstretched and my left leg hanging free. When I realized what had happened to me and saw the men below me on the rope drop off and fall to the ground I was scared. The ground seemed to be racing away from me at express speed.

Realizing that I must do something to save myself, I made an effort to bend up and reach my leg. To do it was far from easy, and I suppose I must have made a dozen attempts in the course of the ensuing half hour before I succeeded in doubling up enough to catch hold, but once I had caught hold I soon fastened my hands on the rope and hoisted myself until I succeeded in loosening my leg, which by that time was numb. Then I allowed myself to slip gradually down to the end of the rope, and, as good luck would have it, there was a package of cordage knotted into it to give a good handhold.

I got astride the package and soon made myself comparatively comfortable. I observed that the wind was in the right direction for safety; my great anxiety had been lest I should be carried out to sea. The next thing I noticed an airplane that had come up after me. As it came close I waved my handkerchief. But the aviator could do nothing to save me.

Higher and higher I continued to mount until I estimated that I was at an altitude of perhaps 10,000 feet. After that, to my great relief, the balloon began slowly to descend.

As I came closer to the earth I noticed a motorcar with four men following my course. Lower and lower the balloon sank like a tired bird and eventually deposited me in a hedge of brambles, which scratched me considerably. Otherwise I was not much the worse for my adventure. A few minutes later the motorcar, which contained four of my officers, came up and carried me back to the camp.—Youth's Companion.

Beginnings of Baseball.

Abner Doubleday, who later went to West Point and ultimately became a major general in the United States army, is given the credit for originating the game, in 1839. He and some other young men began to play a game they afterward called baseball. One of these, named Cartwright, had the idea of a diamond to improve the game. "Two Old Cat" and "Three Old Cat" were still early forms of ball and were adapted probably from the English game of rounders.

FIND RICHES IN SAND WASTE

Silica in What Had Been Considered Worthless Heaps Means Much to Two Towns.

The activity of the old lumber days at Port Austin, Mich., and vicinity are to be revived, but silica sand, and not lumber, will furnish the motive power for the active industrial scenes. Port Austin's industrial activity is rising Phoenixlike from the ashes, and what was considered a bleak, worthless sand waste is to be converted into golden dollars and give employment to many men, according to the Detroit News.

Summed up in brief a lake shore sand bank has been purchased by a Detroit fuel and building supply company. Analytical tests show that this waste sand, which is known in industrial circles as silica sand, is admirably adapted to foundry and casting work.

Almost 200 men are now at work constructing new docks, for it is planned to ship the sand by water from Port Austin to Detroit. The lumber and timber for the 2,500-foot dock, which is now under construction, is being purchased from farmers in the vicinity of Port Austin, so that the village will also benefit from the item of construction.

The new dock is near the old wharves, which in the early lumbering days of the Thumb made Port Austin and its suburb, Port Crescent, thriving centers. The silica sand deposit, it is stated, will not be exhausted for 30 years.

What was considered a barren, sandy waste promises to put Port Austin and Port Crescent once more on the map of the "Thumb" as wide-awake industrial centers.

MUST NOT TRY ON FINERY

Superstition Regarding Wedding Dress and Veil Is One of the Most Deeply Rooted.

From where it comes, nobody knows, but the superstition that it is "bad luck" to try on a wedding veil, or dress, or mourning costume, is as rife today as ever.

Many times the bride refuses to try on her veil, and oftentimes her dress, until the day of the ceremony, for the superstition goes that "she who wears veil or dress before the appointed time will never marry." When this happens, a model as like the bride as possible, has to be found for whom these old superstitions have not the same terrors; as it is their business, it is supposed to lay the curse; but all the time they are being "tried on" they stand with their fingers crossed, which is so efficacious that it will keep off the baleful influences of the evil eye.

In many shops where wedding finery is being made, there is a squabble over which one is to be allowed to pull out one of her own hairs and sew it into the portion of the veil which covers the bride's head, for if one wants to capture a husband for herself, and good luck in love, there is no surer way of doing it.

BROADCAST GROBER CONCERT TONIGHT

Artist Who Is to Sing Here Friday, March 16, Under Auspices of Elks, Will be Heard by Radio Owners Tonight.

Miss M. Gabriel Grober, with the Albania Quartet and Stuart Swart as accompanist, who are to give the concert at the high school auditorium on Friday evening, March 16, under the auspices of the local Order of Elks, come to this city very highly recommended.

The extent of these artists' ability may be judged by people in this city, especially those who have radios installed in their homes, following the concert this evening at Chancellor Hall, Albany. The broadcasting station at Schenectady, WGY, will send out the concert this evening. An Italian Street Song will be on the program this evening and is attracting Albany's music lovers. Governor Smith and party have made arrangements to hear the concert.

Miss Grober is the possessor of a beautiful lyric soprano voice of great range and has made many admirers in her recent engagements.

Stuart Swart, pianist, accompanist, is well known and is one of the leading musicians in his chosen line in this section. He has also won many friends, among those being the Geraldine Farrar Company, whom he accompanied without a rehearsal when it became necessary to fill a vacancy at an engagement at the Albany armory last year.

Many music lovers here have expressed their intentions of hearing this unusual program and the tickets are selling fast. N. D. J. Murphy, general chairman will gladly give information concerning the tickets or the concert. The proceeds will go toward the Kingston City and Benedictine Hospitals.

SCHOOL LEAGUE ELIMINATIONS

In order to determine what school will represent this section of the state at the state basketball tournament at Syracuse University this year a series of elimination games will be played between the respective league champions along the Hudson. The first of these games will be between North Tarrytown and Port Chester on March 9 or 10 at White Plains. The Orange county champion will play Nyack on March 16 at 9 a. m. The winner of the Orange county league has not been determined as yet as a tie exists between Cornwall High School of Cornwall-on-the-Hudson and Chester which tie must be played off by March 10 or the Orange county league will forfeit its right to compete. In case the Orange county league is not represented Poughkeepsie High School will take its place and play Nyack. If such is not the case Poughkeepsie will play the winner of the North Tarrytown-Port Chester game on March 16 at 7:30 p. m. at the Newburgh armory. The finals will be played on Saturday, March 17 at 3 p. m. at the Newburgh armory.

Captain Also Had Grievance.

One of the petty grievances of private soldiers and non-commissioned officers at Camp Taylor during the late war was the ban on rolled leggings. But they were frequently smuggled in and worn on trips home. On such an occasion a private from Camp Taylor had reached Vincennes, Ind., in the full glory of borrowed and illegitimate leggings. However, his pride of possession was short-lived, for he soon saw a captain whom he had known slightly in civilian life. The captain, after looking at him intently for a while, strode up to him and our private had uncomfortable visions of a panorama from the guardhouse to the firing squad. "Do they allow you to wear rolled leggings at Camp Taylor?" the captain demanded with a flashing eye. "No, sir," the private stuttered. "Humph," said the officer indignantly, "they don't at Camp Grant, either, and I think it's a gosh awful shame!"

LEAVE THEIR ANCIENT HOMES

Ancestral Mansions of France Are Passing Out of the Possession of Proud Families.

The old families of France are feeling the pinch of adversity and, as in London, Devonshire house and other ancestral homes are being turned to baser uses, so in Paris the famous mansions of the country's great families are finding new owners. The residence of the princess of Wagram is now the Spanish embassy, the wonderful hotel in which Princess Jacques de Broglie once gave her "ball of precious stones" is now the United States embassy; the new Czechoslovakian representative lives in the mansion of the ancient de Ligne family, while the residence of the late duc de Pomar, which was inspired by Mary Stuart's Edinburgh home, Holyrood manor, now shelters the Bulgarian ambassador. The Gaillard mansion, Place Malesherbes, a copy of one of the wings of the castle of Blois, is to become a branch office of the Bank of France, while the ancestral home of the Bourg de Bozas, in the Rue Pierre Ier de Serbie, is now to be hired for dances or entertainments. Other ancestral homes, a Figaro writer points out, have been taken by antiquaries, notably the Sagan mansion and the Morny mansion— And the list could be continued.—From the Continental Edition of the London Mail.

Owned House; Lived in Cowshed.

An almost unbelievable case of a woman with six children living in a cowshed has come to light in Leicestershire, Eng., when the husband, who has been nine weeks in a sanatorium, and is shortly returning to the cowshed, appealed to the council to get them rooms in the workhouse. They have lived in the cowshed for 18 months. "It snowed on us as we lay in bed last winter," the man said. "We cannot stand another winter there." One girl of seven had died from the cold. The curious part of the matter is that the man owned four houses, but could not get possession of them, owing to governmental leasing regulations.

WILTED BEFORE THE THREAT

Student Saw Awful Possibility in Two Words Addressed to Him by Prefect of Study.

Fifty-five years ago a certain Indianapolis man was a student or, as he always insists, a pupil, at Notre Dame university. At that time he was only a youngster and, he admits, "cut up a little."

One fatal day, he took with him to the study hall a copy of "Billy Bowlegs," which he hid in his geography and began to read avidly. In fact, he became so interested that he failed to hear the prefect of study when the latter called on him for a recitation. Finally the prefect called him to the desk in the front of the room. There was no opportunity to get rid of the book, so up to the desk he walked, book in hand.

The prefect unostentatiously took "Billy Bowlegs," handed our hero his geography and told him to return to his seat.

Several days later, when the Indianapolis man of today began to whisper and to grow fractious, the prefect said to him just two words.

"Now, Billy."

Instantly, the pupil became very quiet and always in the future was a model student, while in that class.

For he feared the prefect would disclose the dreadful truth and he would go through school, branded with the name, "Billy Bowlegs."—Indianapolis News.

Thought for the Day.

The bad habit we do not begin, we will never have to quit.

Panel's Interesting History.

A gruesome story attaches to a Flemish glass panel of the Fourteenth century, which was on exhibition in London, with other stained glass work centuries old. On the panel is represented the suicide of Judas Iscariot, with vividly circumstantial and morbid details. In old books of the period reference is made to a glass painter, known as Charles of Ypres, who is known to have executed a great part of the most remarkable work of the time, having hanged himself to a tree. This and other evidence makes it probable that the panel was the actual work of this very man. Another panel represents what is probably the only contemporary portrait on stained glass of Richard III. It recently came to light after being stored away in an Essex mansion for 113 years.

Comparatively New Game.

The history of the game of rackets, the world's championship of which was recently disputed in New York, is a comparatively short one, for it only came into vogue early in the Nineteenth century. Dickens refers to it in his "Pickwick Papers" in connection with Fleet prison, where insolvent debtors enlivened the monotony of their life by playing against a single wall. It was mostly played at the back of taverns.

The name is supposed to have been derived from the Arabic ra'bet, meaning "palm of the hand," but fives is the only near survival of that form of the game.

ORIGINAL CELTICS TO PLAY MORGENWECK MEN HERE MARCH 19

The New York State Basketball League is fast coming to a close with the team representing this city at the head of the standing. Three games remain before the Morgenweck clan is finished. Two games are scheduled to be played upstate, one with Troy the other with Schenectady. Just when the games will be played is not known, but Manager Morgenweck stated last evening that if they don't set a date before the 15th of this month he will not play the games. Both of these teams have refused offers to play on this court. Albany plays here next Monday evening in the last home league game of the season. When the Senators come here next Monday evening, Marty Friedman, who retired from the game some time ago, will be seen in action. The Senators have eight more games to be played before completing their schedule and Manager Bill Hepinstall says he is going to win all eight and the championship. Wednesday night Schenectady plays at Albany and on Saturday night Troy plays there.

Exhibition games will be played by the Kingston team and some good teams will be seen here in the near future. On Monday evening, March 19, Manager Morgenweck has planned for the first exhibition game, the Original Celtics. The local manager also stated that there would be no difficulty in securing reserved seats this time as he has planned to reserve the bleachers on the uptown side of the drill shed which will offer a greater accommodation.

Peculiarity of Tadpoles.

Tadpoles fed on extract of the thyroid gland develop through the various stages of their metamorphosis into frogs very rapidly, but they do not grow in size; when their own thyroids are suppressed—by cauterization or excision—or when they are fed on extracts of the thymus gland they grow to great size, but never develop into frogs, remaining nothing but giant tadpoles.

COHOES LOSES HERE AGAIN

Morgenweck Ball Bouncers Beat Donlon's Cohorts Monday Night—C. Husta Gets The Scoring Honors.

Kingston cut down the possibilities of losing the second half honors of the New York State Basketball League, by defeating the Cohoes team Monday night at the armory court by a 21 to 18 score. The Morgenweck clan now sits pretty at the head of the league list, with but three games remaining before the schedule is completed.

About a thousand fans saw the dimmest game of the season Monday evening, both clusters of lights in the center of the court being out. The center men and the referee were not affected, the fans being the only ones that might have been cheated.

The game started wide open and remained that way throughout and offered a number of interesting and thrilling moments. The contest was an unusual one, with the Cohoes squad scoring the honors for their uniqueness. At times the game would be as swift as possible and then prosy. Trippe jumping center for the visitors was the cause of the funny work, between his holding, pushing and not jumping tactics, Referee Solodar's court life was, mildly speaking, made unpleasant. These queer actions at the center position did not stop the remaining players of the upstate team from doing very good work. Boyle, playing Benny Borgman, was in the game every minute, besides scoring 7 points he kept the leading scorer down to 4 points. Vincent, a youth playing forward, also did good work. M. Husta was pitted against him and the little fellows made interesting opponents C. Husta was the big point getter of the game, having himself credited with 9 points. Carl played a wonderful game with his opponent Kampmier playing his usual close and rough game. Sugarman, old time Kingston player, played the other forward position for the upstate team, but he didn't do much against Nick Harvey.

Both teams were very poor from the gift line, Kingston being given 28 chances and only making good 9, and Cohoes 15 chances, of which 4 were made good. Right up until the last minute closing time the game was uncertain as to the winner. Kingston by some clever passing would near the basket and get a field, to offset this Boyle would take a number of shots from the center of the floor and every now and then bury one. The first half ended with the local representatives in front of a 13 to 7 tally. During the second half the upstate team did better and caused the local ball bouncers no little worry in pulling off the court a winner by a 21 to 18 score.

Obstinate.

There is no great virtue in doing a thing that no one else wants you to do, simply because you are "obstinate." If it is a matter of principle that is all right, but only fools stick to their own opinions when it is contrary to the opinions of other people, just to be contrary.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

RESULTS IN BOWLING LEAGUE

The Mercantile Bowling League got in swing again Monday night when a double match was held at the "Y" alleys. The Telephone and F. B. Matthews companies emerged the winners, the former by a two to one win over the Schilling team, and the latter by a complete victory over the National Ulster County Bank. The closer of the two matches was the one between the "hello" boys and the furniture makers, the difference of a spare giving the second game to the telephone men. The Schilling squad, however, decided that they were to have at least one victory in this league, and since no time is like the present, they scored a clean win in the third game, beating their opponents by sixty pins. In the other match, Short demonstrated what determination will do, when he started off with a less-than-a-hundred game, but finished up with an average of 159, getting the honors in that match.

Wisconsin is the only state which exceeds New York in total number of dairy cattle. Minnesota has nearly as many dairy cattle as New York. On January 1, 1920, New York had 2,081,074 dairy cattle, including 1,481,918 cows and heifers two years or older. New York has had approximately the same number of dairy cows for the past fifty years.

Low Cost Night Light.

By the ingenious combination of a small stepdown transformer and an automobile incandescent bulb, an inventor has recently introduced a night light which costs practically nothing to operate. Indeed, this light, operating on the standard alternating current supply lines, hardly affects the usual meter, hence the cost is negligible.

Setting the Table.

In ancient days a man's politics often dictated his table manners. So bitter was the hatred between the Guelphs and Ghibellines of Florence that they could not even agree on how to set a table. The Guelphs placed their knives and spoons longwise on the table, the Ghibellines placed theirs across; the first cut their loaves of bread longwise, the second cut their across; they even sliced their oranges differently.
